You may or may not be surprised to hear that I use Canva DAILY. As a graphic designer, I've found Canva is by far the best tool to get compelling and aesthetically pleasing graphics out quick. I use Adobe Illustrator for logos and InDesign for large printed materials, and Procreate for digital artwork.

Canva has an excellent resource for creating my social media posts for myself and clients, creating mood boards, email templates, graphs/charts, videos, presentations, and more! I actually created all my free guides in Canva! I am a Canva Designer which means I make templates and graphics for others to use on the platform. All Canva Designers are experienced Graphic Designers so you know you're getting quality templates.

I'm going to break down a few of Canva's services so you can get a better idea as to how this service can be beneficial for your small business. But first, some stats straight from Canva's website.

Canva also allows you to edit photos to adjust the coloring, remove the background, and create mockups (of phones, laptops, shirts, mugs, and more).

They have a frequently updated blog to help you navigate their platform and use it to its full capabilities. And this awesome resource for getting inspiration.

You can add people to your Canva team so multiple people can work from one Canva account. This is great if you have a small marketing team or if you're whole team does a little bit of everything!

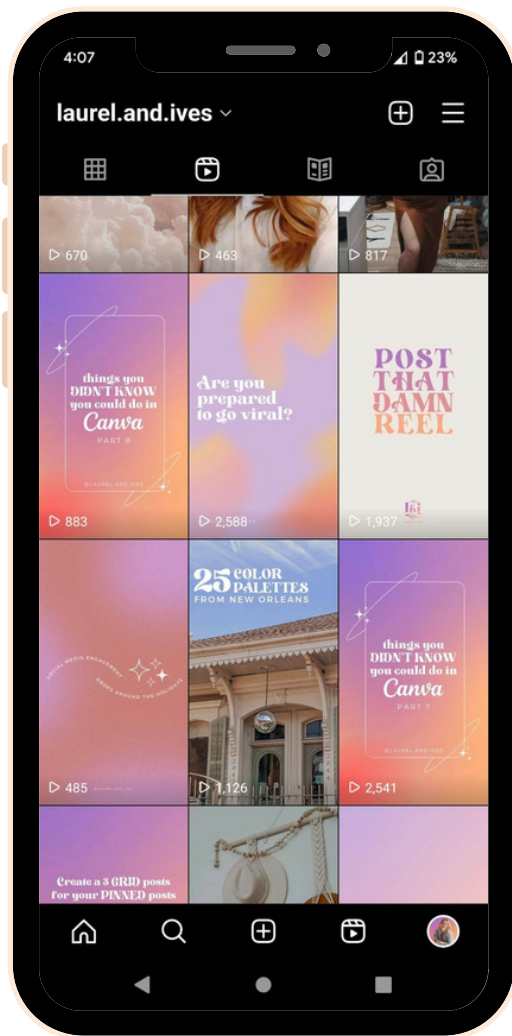

Canva allows you to create a brand kit where you can import your brand colors, fonts, and logos to ensure all your creations are consistent and on brand.

And lastly, one of my favorite Canva features is the easy to use mobile app! The mobile app and website run very similarly, making it easy to bounce between the two. It comes with an autosave feature so if I'm designing something on my computer and need to come back to it on my phone or iPad, I can!

If you're just getting into Canva and need some guidance on where to start, join Canva's free Design School to get a step-by-step breakdown on how to utilize their service.
